USDA seeking public comment on beef carcass grade update

By DOUG SCHMITZ
Iowa Correspondent

AMES, Iowa – The USDA’s Agricultural Marketing Service (AMS) is currently seeking input from the public and stakeholders on how the U.S. Standards for Grades of Carcass Beef may be updated to better serve the needs of industry, large-volume food buyers, and modern consumers.

The USDA said this request for comments stems from an American Wagyu (cattle) Association petition, which requested that AMS consider adding marbling degrees to the USDA Prime grade for beef to better characterize modern genetics, which are not always differentiated within the current marbling degrees.

“There would definitely be some benefit in updating standards of carcass grading overall,” Grant Dewell, DVM, associate professor of veterinary medicine and beef extension veterinarian at Iowa State University in Ames, told Farm World. “I have not followed the Wagyu Association’s issue closely enough, but with the shift in the percent prime carcasses in the last 10 years, there could be some value increase the number of marbling scores.

“This trend shows how competitive the prime category is becoming, and that our traditional cattle genetics are marbling at a high degree that the Wagyu association feels there would be some benefit to more categories,” he added. “Our current cattle genetics and feeding programs have rapidly increased the number of high-quality cattle for the market.”

The USDA said beef producers, packers, wholesalers, food manufacturers, foodservice operators, food retailers and consumers rely on the agency’s voluntary beef grading services to ensure that requirements are met for quality and other factors.

The agency added that USDA grading offers an independent third-party opinion on product quality based on the USDA requirements to help producers market their products, and assures buyers that the quality meets or exceeds those standards.

“I think it is appropriate to update the U.S. Standards for Grades of Carcass Beef,” Andrew P. Griffith, University of Tennessee professor of agricultural and resource economics, told Farm World. “The industry would benefit from differentiation in Prime Grade beef just like Choice is differentiated.

“The expectation is that there would be some price differences, but it may not be as big of a difference as some may expect,” added Griffith, who has run his own cattle operation since 2017, currently with 550 to 600 head, which includes a mix of mature cows, heifer development and stocker cattle. “However, it would allow buyers to select the product their customers demand.”

Published in the Federal Register on July 8, this initiative seeks stakeholder input on modernizing these foundational standards, which guide the classification of beef quality and yield, the USDA said.

The call for comments, open until Sept. 8, focuses on two primary areas: refining marbling degrees within the USDA Prime grade, and reassessing the skeletal maturity requirements for younger cattle.

AMS is also soliciting public comment on whether to eliminate this skeletal maturity requirement for carcasses determined by dentition to be under 30 months of age, with AMS adding, “Scientific research and data on beef tenderness suggest that the skeletal maturity requirement could be eliminated.”

According to the USDA, dentition is an examination of an animal’s teeth to determine its physiological age at slaughter. Because older cattle produce tougher meat, dentition is used to separate carcasses into age categories, which directly dictates the meat’s quality grade and palatability.

Griffith said the removal of the skeletal maturity requirement is one of indifference: “There is a cost to determining the skeletal maturity, which makes things more expensive. This requirement was mainly instituted for the export market. The domestic market is not as concerned. Most consum-

Agronomy Farm’s inaugural field day showcased soybeans

By TIM ALEXANDER
Illinois Correspondent

HEYWORTH, Ill. — Illinois Soybean Association’s checkoff and university-sponsored research programs and field trials were in the spotlight during the inaugural field day at their new Agronomy Farm. Located just a few minutes south of their Bloomington-Normal offices, the event was held on July 16.

The first-ever gathering of members, researchers and media at the new, 97-acre research farm included updates on 2026 action trials conducted by growers enrolled in ISA’s On-Farm Trial Network, the Illinois Soybean Breeding Project and soybean studies conducted in conjunction with the University of Illinois.

“The new Agronomy Farm serves as a hub for all of our research,” said Abigail Peterson, a certified crop advisor (CCA) and director of agronomy for ISA. “We have in the back (acreage) a full-scale, 40-acre sulfur action trial that is being replicated by farmers across the state. With one shot at the growing season and everyone experiencing a different spring, having this farm as a (control location) and expanding our research to other fields across the state is what we are trying to do.”

Peterson and other ISA agronomists on-site that day urged farmers in attendance to join their On-Farm Trial Network (OFTN) and share the results of their own sulfur trials and other research projects currently open to soybean growers. They are especially seeking input from southern Illinois soybean growers who are willing to devote acreage to double-crop soybean population trials.

“The OFTN is something we’ve been working on for the past couple of years. Essentially, it was established in order to bridge the gap between university research plots and farmers’ fields,” said Darby Danzl, ISA regional technical agronomist. “We want to bring back research to growers’ fields to see if a (university-recommended) practice will have the same impact on their operation.”

ISA agronomists, led by lead consultant Jim Isermann, are collaborating with university researchers and scientists from around the state to gather and verify data from independent farmers’ crop fields in the program’s second year. 2026 OFTN “action trials,” including the sulfur ratio and double-crop soybean population studies, are ongoing in around 30 fields across Illinois, providing a diverse set of research sites that reflect the state’s different soils, climates and management systems.

In addition to their OFTN studies, a number of ISA “Legacy Trials” are also ongoing. “These are long-term studies and demonstration sites,” said Stephanie Porter, CCA and research agronomist for ISA. Legacy Trials remain in place for multiple growing seasons, providing guidance and feedback for adopting those practices. Sites remain in place for a minimum of five years with the ISA agronomy team working with farmer participants on developing a plan that works best for them while still providing good comparison data, Porter explained.

Dr. Eliana Monteverde, assistant professor of crop sciences at the University of Illinois, told farmers attending the open house that ISA is currently funding three university-led research projects within the U of I's Soybean Breeding Program. One project involves the study of how amino acid composition in seed varies across different environments, and how amino acid genetics may be improved.

"Of course, amino acid composition is important because it determines protein quality in our soybean. They are the main building blocks of soybeans, but the problem is many soybean (varieties) have very low concentrations of these essential acids. We are trying to improve the specific concentration of amino acids that are low in soybean meal. Companies are (currently) adding it artificially, and this brings cost to the front of the chain," Monteverde said.

The amino acids project through the U of I Department of Crop Sciences is also drawing data from trials in neighboring soybean-producing states, according to Monteverde, through the cooperation of farmers in the Illinois Soybean Breeding Project.

"We are also developing lines that have new genes for SCN (soybean cyst nematode) resistance," Monteverde continued. "This new (fourth) gene that we are adding comes from work done at our university and from our (USDA) Germplasm Bank. We have some of these research plots here (at the ISA Agronomy Farm). Part of our job is to take those genes —while getting rid of the ones that are undesirable — and put them into high-yielding (soybean) varieties for the industry pipeline."

Indiana-based Beck's Hybrids is one industry partner to benefit from the work of the Soybean Breeding Program. Beck's purchased the genetics to commercialize 10 varieties of high-oleic soybeans, a premium specialty crop that is the subject of a third ISA-funded U of I study.

Other ongoing projects at the ISA Agronomy Farm include a long-term MRTN (maximum return to nitrogen) study being conducted by Dan Schaefer, director of nutrient stewardship for the Illinois Fertilizer and Chemical Association. A seven-acre biomass demonstration plot comparing winter barley and cereal rye is also under study.

In addition, ISA collaborated with the local Natural Resources Conservation Service office to establish a cover crop species demonstration plot that will continue to expand in the coming years. In collaboration with Pheasants Forever and Quail Forever a long-term pollinator plot was also established at the front of the field.

Porter added that observations from all 2026 university-led, OFTN and Legacy Trial studies would be summarized in ISA's first-ever "Illinois Soybean Research Review" publication to be issued this fall. "Coming soon, this publication will have all the main takeaways and some of the main protocols from all of the research studies we've funded," she said.

ISA is actively recruiting farmers to participate in their Action and Legacy trials across the state of Illinois. Requirements vary by trial, so visit fieldadvisor.org/on-farm-trial-network/ to see the full protocols and specific requirements. All ISA-led trials require that farmers have a calibrated yield monitor and a minimum of 40 acres enrolled in order to participate.

Global corn stocks continue declining in July; 10 year low

One factor from the July World Agricultural Supply and Demand Estimates balance sheet update that needs to be watched is the world corn supply. Global corn stocks have been declining for the past several years and are now forecast to total 275 million metric tons at the end of the 2026/27 marketing year. This is the tightest ending stocks in 10 years and a stocks to use of 18 percent.

The stocks to use on U.S. corn for the 2026/27 marketing year is 11 percent. Rationing would be warranted in both the domestic and global corn markets at these carryout levels.

Since China made its first new crop soybean purchases, the country has booked a total of 136,000 mt for old crop delivery and 992,000 mt for new crop. While this has been supportive, China has a soybean import target of 25 mmt for the 2026/27 marketing year. Until China's purchases top this level, daily bookings will receive limited response.

MARKET ANALYSIS
By Karl Setzer

Chinese import trends have changed in recent years as the country tries to expand commodity sources and spread risk. This risk buying is both from production and from price. One source of supplies China has started to open up to is Australia. The latest approval has been to canola trade, with China allowing some canola processors to buy directly from Australian sellers. China has also

AB now has the Brazil soybean crop at 180.57 mmt, up slightly from the June 180.25 mmt estimate. Soybean exports are forecast at 116.3 mmt, steady from June, and ending stocks at 8.79 mmt versus 9.28 mmt last month. CONAB's corn crop estimate is now 141.73 mmt, up from June's 140.46 mmt. Exports held steady at 46.5 mmt, and ending stocks increased from 13.25 mmt last month to a current 14.5 mmt. The large crops are the result of elevated acreage from initial projections. Brazil's wheat crop is estimated at 6.03 mmt. The USDA is currently forecasting Brazil crops of 138 mmt on corn, 180 mmt for soybeans, and 7.87 mmt on wheat.

Chinese officials have released a portion of the country's June import numbers. China imported 13.55 mmt of soybeans in June, a 10.5 percent increase from June 2025. China's 2026 soybean imports now total 50.15 mmt, an increase of 1.5 percent from last year. China also reported June meat imports of 532,000 mt. Year-to-date meat imports now total 3.11 mmt, 3 percent less than the 2025 pace. China continues to cull its domestic hog herd, lessening the need for pork imports. China has also shifted to more beef in diets, and high costs have limited imports of that product.

Chinese pork production to start 2026 was up 3.3 percent from the same period in 2025. Data from MLH Futures Trading shows Chinese hog slaughter in the first six months of 2026 totaled 372.46 million head, and increase of 1.7 percent from the same period in 2025. This was a result of China trying to cull enough hogs to meet government targets. Even with accelerated culling, China has 424.91 million hogs, a slight increase from last year. This indicates China will

The USDA said it develops and maintains official grade standards for beef carcasses, which measure factors such as meat yield, fat covering, ribeye area, degrees of marbling and carcass defects such as dark cutting beef and blood splash. The standards are applied to determine the quality of the product, and are not a reflection of wholesomeness, which is determined by the agency's Food Safety and Inspection Service prior to the grading process, the agency said.

David Trowbridge, of Gregory Feedlots in Tabor, Iowa, told Farm World, “Over the past several years, we've done a good job educating consumers about beef quality grades, and what they represent.”

As a result, he said, demand for Prime beef has increased because consumers better understand the value and eating experience associated with higher-quality beef: “If quality grading standards are updated in the future, we must maintain, or even strengthen, the integrity of those standards.”

He said he believes there's an opportunity to modernize yield grading: “Rather than relying primarily on fat measurements, we should move toward evaluating actual red meat yield. Advances in technologies like 3D imaging are bringing us closer to that reality. These tools could allow cattle to be measured in the feedlot before harvest, but widespread adoption will require collaboration throughout the supply chain, including packers.”

He added, “Today, we are feeding cattle to heavier weights, which can result in excess fat. The industry's goal should be to produce more lean beef and less excess fat. Achieving that will require both genetic progress and more accurate methods of measuring red meat yield.”

AMS will evaluate comments received by Sept. 8 and consider any next steps supported by stakeholders, including proposing revisions to the standards. If revisions are made, AMS will publish a draft of the updated United States Standards for Grades of Carcass Beef in the Federal Register for an additional comment period, the agency said.

announced it will be booking feed grain from Australia, and has opened the door for barley trade.

Weather stress continues to impact European Union crops. The firm CO-CERAL is stating that EU and United Kingdom grain production has been lost from the extreme heat and lack of rainfall. Total soft wheat production for this region is forecast at 140.8 million mt, a decrease of 3 mmt from the last estimate. Corn production is forecast at 52.7 mmt, down from the prior 57.2 mmt projection. France has also cut its crop ratings from adverse weather, with wheat now rated 65 percent Good/Excellent, down 3 percent, and the corn crop rated 47 percent G/E, down 10 percent in the past week.

Wheat harvest is well underway in Argentina, but farmer selling has been minimal. Argentine farmers have only marketed 2 mmt of this year's wheat production, roughly 10 percent of the crop. The average sales pace at this time of the year is 16.6 percent of production. Uncertain production and currency fluctuations are the primary reasons behind low wheat sales. Argentine farmers are also showing hesitancy in marketing new crop soybeans for the same reasons.

The Brazilian firm CONAB has updated their production forecasts. CON-

UK to host Summer Forage Tour

LEXINGTON, Ky. — University of Kentucky Forages Extension and the Kentucky Master Grazer Educational Program will host the Summer Forage Tour Aug. 11 at Josett Farm in Springfield, Ky. The tour begins at 3 p.m. and will feature practical grazing strategies for improving beef cattle pastures.

"This Summer Forage Tour will highlight how a dairy-turned-beef farm is addressing toxic tall fescue with novel endophyte stands, putting native warm-season grasses like Eastern gamma grass and switchgrass into productive use, and rotationally grazing 350 acres with intention," said Chris Teutsch, Ph.D., Extension forage specialist at the UK Research and Education Center. "Producers will be able to see these strategies first-hand and ask questions about implementation." John and Jill Settles, who are hosting the tour, have been part of the cattle industry for more than 30 years. After leaving the dairy industry in 2000, they transitioned to beef cattle and have continued building their operation at Josett Farm.

"Hoping to improve their pastures and the land that supports them, the Settles are consistent and patient in their practices, and this shows on their farm," Teutsch said. "Come for a visit and see for yourself."

Admission is $10 per person, payable upon arrival. Participants are asked to bring portable seating. Dinner is included, and children eat free. Pre-registration is requested at <https://26summerforage-tour.eventbrite.com/>.

likely see heavier herd liquidation for the remainder of the year. This comes at the same time pork demand in China is falling in favor of more beef in diets.

The Consumer Price Index for June was better than trade expected. The June CPI reading showed year to year U.S. inflation of 3.5 percent. This compared to estimates for a 3.8 percent increase and May's 4.2 percent. Core inflation in June was 2.6 percent and was also below the estimate for 2.8 percent and the May reading of 2.9 percent. While these numbers are positive, these were from data while the U.S. and Iran were in a ceasefire. Now that fighting has escalated, many costs that contribute to inflation will likely rise. Inflation also remains well above the 2 percent Fed Reserve target. These factors limited street response to the drop in inflation.

Grant program expands so more students can experience parks

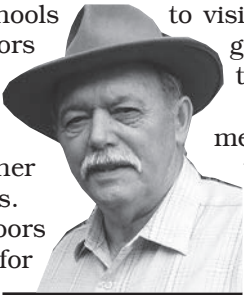

Students at 72 Indiana schools will experience the outdoors during the 2026-27 school year thanks in part to a grant program supporting field trips to Indiana State Parks and other state park-managed properties.

The Discover the Outdoors Field Trip Grant Program is for all K-12 schools and is administered through the Indiana Natural Resources Foundation (INRF), the supporting nonprofit of the DNR.

Grants of up to $500 are awarded to fund transportation costs, program fees, and classroom supplies related to the field trips. Generous donations to the program have also allowed the program to increase the total dollars distributed.

The program is expected to distribute $30,154 through 72 grants this year, the largest amount in its existence. An estimated 5,019 K-12 students will benefit.

Since the program's start in 2013, a total of 415 field trip grants have been awarded, giving an estimated 35,900 students the opportunity to visit state parks at a reduced cost to schools and students. With this year's awards, more than $108,500 in overall funding has been distributed to allow students to visit an Indiana state park for a guided hike or talk with an interpretive naturalist.

The fund was established in memory of Tom Huck, a long-time DNR employee who was an ardent supporter of outdoor experiences for children in parks. In addition to generous individuals, periodic support for the program is provided by the Indiana Master Naturalist Advisory Council, the Indiana Parks Alliance, and the INRF.

"We appreciate the generosity of those who contribute to Indiana's youth," INRF executive director Jody Kress said. "We hope to see this program grow so we can educate more students across the state about our natural and cultural legacy."

Expansion To Austin Bottoms Conservation Area

The Indiana Department of Natural Resources (DNR) recently announced the acquisition of 15 acres of land to become the newest addition to Austin Bottoms Conservation Area in Scott County.

The acquired land is undeveloped and completely forested. It adds to the more than 26,000 acres Austin Bottoms already covers, which is permanently protected for wildlife habitat and outdoor recreation.

The Central Indiana Land Trust (CILTI) purchased the property in February 2024 and then conveyed it to DNR at a discount in May 2026. DNR used President Benjamin Harrison Conservation Trust (PBHCT) funds to acquire the property from CILTI.

The PBHCT is primarily funded through the sale of the blue Environmental license plate and works to ensure Indiana's rich natural heritage is preserved for future generations. Since 1992, DNR has used proceeds from the Environmental Plate to purchase and protect more than 74,000 acres of land on behalf of all Hoosiers.

Austin Bottoms Conservation Area stretches along the Muscatatuck River and through Scott, Jackson, and Washington counties. It comprises a variety of habitat types, dominated by bottomland forests and wetlands. The bottomland forest is host to maples, oaks, sweetgum, river birch, sycamore and beech. Many birds use bottomland hardwood forests such as wild turkey, yellow- and black-crowned night herons, wood ducks, red-headed woodpeckers, and many others. The bottomland hardwoods also provide excellent habitat for many mammals such as white-tailed deer, bobcat, raccoon, skunk, fox, beaver, otter, mink, opossum, gray fox, flying squirrel, and fox squirrel.

"Indiana is home to a rich variety of landscapes, and protecting ecosystems like those at the Austin Bottoms Conservation Area is essential to preserving that diversity," DNR Director Alan Morrison said. "One of the simplest ways Hoosiers can support future conservation efforts is by choosing the blue environmental license plate, which directly helps fund land protection across the state."

Fall Licenses & GoOutdoorsIN Mobile App

Licenses are now on sale for fall turkey, deer, bobcat, and trapping seasons. The licenses can now be purchased at GoOutdoorsIN.com, by mail, or through in-person retailers listed at on.IN.gov/HuntFishLicenseRetailers.

An additional way to purchase a license is DNR's new smartphone app, GoOutdoorsIN. The app is free and available for download for Android and iOS. Hunters and anglers can use the app to view their licenses, buy a new license, and check in their harvest from their smartphones.

'till next time,

New packing plant opens for Hildebrand Fruit Farm

By Stan Maddux
Indiana Correspondent

BERRIEN SPRINGS, Mich. – A family-owned Michigan fruit farm has taken a major step aimed at continued growth just one year short of its 100th birthday.

Hildebrand Fruit Farms didn't waste time putting its new and much larger packing facility to use after a July 16 ribbon cutting. Peaches were packed beginning the next day in the near 30,000-square-foot building, which has twice as much space as the previous 60-year old facility.

Owner Mike Hildebrand, a fourth-generation owner/operator of the farm near Berrien Springs in the southwest part of the state, said there was barely any room left in the old packing facility to take in more fruit.

He said the packing facility used to be owned by Dave Pagel, who was in the business of packing fruit for area farmers for 40 years until retiring. Hildebrand said the farm purchased the packing facility eight years ago.

At the time, it was large enough to pack fruit from the Hildebrand farm and other area growers but as more growers were added, the packing facility – just over a mile from the Hildebrand farm – became too small.

"We were just out of space and kept growing. Eventually, our building was going to be a limiting factor on growth," he said.

The $4 million project was assisted with a $175,000 grant from the Michigan Department of Agriculture and Rural Development (MDARD).

Book helps guide family through journey with Alzheimer’s, dementia

“When Memory Fades: What to Expect at Every Stage, from Early Signs to Full Support for Alzheimer’s and Dementia” by Nathaniel Chin, MD
c.2026, St. Martin’s Essentials, $30, 422 pages

Mom called you in a panic the other day. She’d lost her keys and by the time you arrived to help, she’d found them.

In the refrigerator.
These kinds of things keep happening, not often but often enough, and you don’t know quite what to worry about. But in the new book “When Memory Fades” by Nathaniel Chin, MD, you’ll learn about the journey ahead for both of you.

You can’t remember why you walked into a room. You got lost last week, going to the bank. Popular wisdom says that things like that are normal as we age, but Chin says that’s not true – although the answer may not be a worst-case scenario, either. Yes, memory problems could just be signs of stress, dehydration or lack of sleep – or is it time to see a doctor?

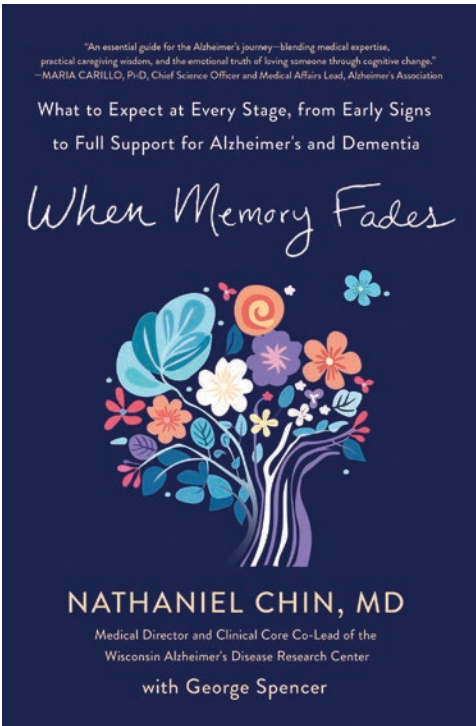

THE BOOKWORM SEZ
Terri Schlichenmeyer

Chin says maybe, yes.
He was working his way through medical residency when his father, a geriatrician in Madison, Wis., was diagnosed with Alzheimer’s. Chin, now a geriatrician, was blindsided, but that diagnosis also changed his life.
Here, he writes about the brain, and how Alzheimer’s and dementia are diagnosed, explaining that dementia has many faces and, depending on a doctor’s evaluation, memory problems might be slowed or improved. He shares his father’s illness with readers, but he also writes about his mother, a steadfast, steady caretaker.
Her story reminds reader-guardians to care for themselves, too.

Know how to talk the talk, so that you can have “a more productive” conversation with your doctor. Understand that there’s nothing “normal” about dementia or Alzheimer’s. Know the statistics – African Americans are affected with dementia twice as much as whites – and know how to lower your risks. Learn here what questions to ask, how to break the news to everyone, and any legal matters that will be important soon. And know how to tend to you.

Says Chin, “The best action you can take is to educate yourself... The more you understand, the better equipped you are to make sound judgments.”
Something’s off about dad, just a lot of little things that don’t add up. When is it time to step in? “When Memory Fades” can help you decide.
Wise, widespread, comprehensive and compassionately helpful, this is a book you can read and then take it to the doctor with your loved one. It’s a book that makes sense when nothing else does, and its biggest feature is that it smoothly transitions from easy-to-grasp science and charts, to gentle coaching for caregivers. Chin writes with storytelling, humility, grace, and experience from both sides of the Alzheimer’s/dementia issue, and his words are reassuring but also urgent. Learn, but don’t wait, he says. Know how to safeguard yourself. See your doctor, and don’t fear testing. Watch for signs of depression. And never, ever stop asking for help.
Read those last seven words and find

“When Memory Fades” now. It’s a book to have on your shelf, whether you’re 45 or 95 because, as you’ll see, dementia happens and knowledge is key.

Michigan Fruit Farm

The funds were taken from MDARD’s Food and Agriculture Investment Program aimed at providing financial support for food and agriculture projects selected based on their impact on the industry in the state.
MDARD Director Tim Boring said expansion projects like the one at Hildebrand Fruit Farms strengthen regional food systems, support jobs and, ultimately, drive economic impact.
“With a rich history and dedication to community, farms like Hildebrand are the backbone of Michigan’s agriculture industry,” he said.

The new packing facility also has a more efficient layout along with increased capacity and equipment options.
The roots of the Hildebrand farm stretch back to 1912 when Adolph Hildebrand, a German displaced by war, immigrated from modern-day Ukraine to the U.S. He settled in nearby St. Joseph where he met his future wife, Alma.
Both worked in a factory but they purchased the original 40-acre farm in 1927 because of dust in the workplace causing respiratory problems.

Alma grew up on a fruit farm and taught her husband how to grow peaches, apples, strawberries, raspberries, grapes and other fruit.
Most of what they grew was sold at a farmers market about 25 miles away from the farm across the Indiana state line in South Bend. Eventually, more land was added to the farm, which now has about 300 acres of apples, peaches, pears and grapes.
“We’ve been very blessed to have more customers. More business,” he said.
Hildebrand said the new ground includes a farm purchased when he decided as a senior in high school that he wanted to join the family’s operation.

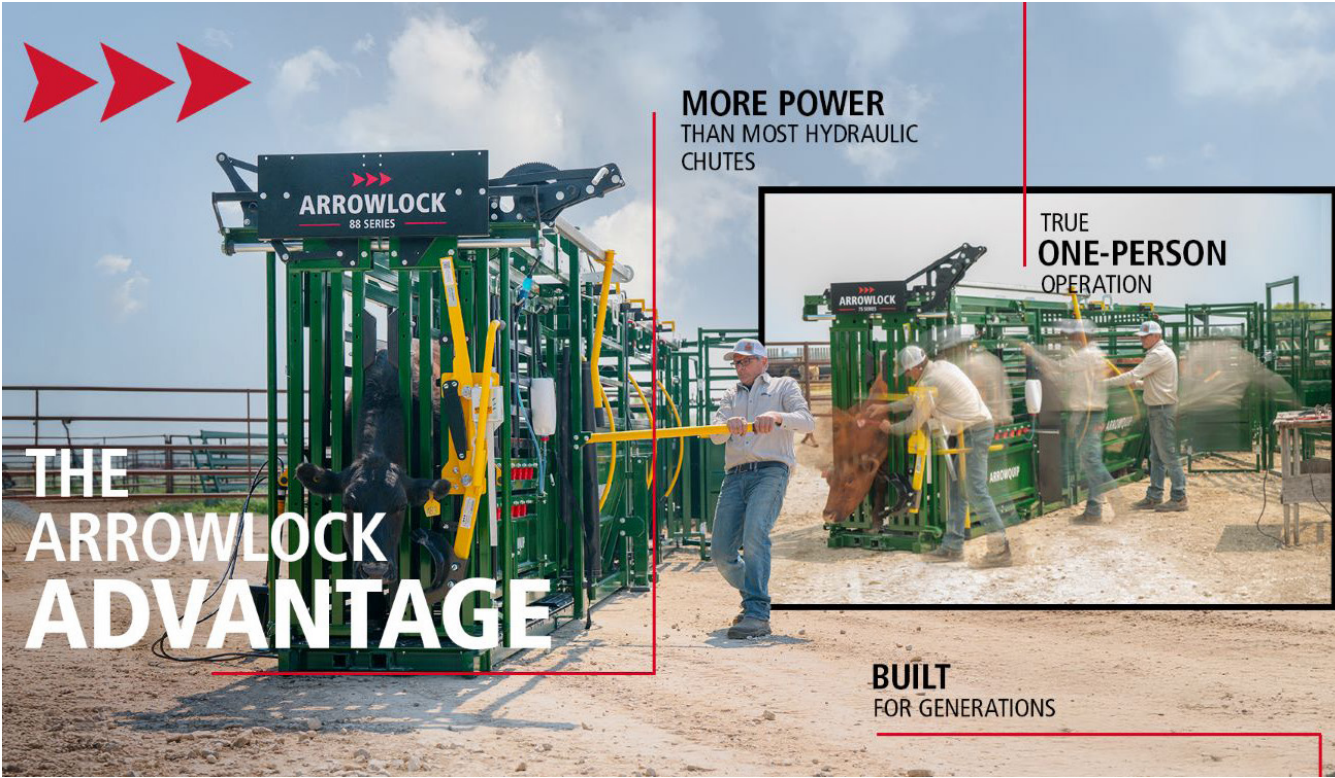

One of the reasons he had the new packing facility built was to continue growing the business for his three children after they recently expressed an interest in becoming the next owner/operators of the family farm.
“So, it’s like, let’s go. It’s now or never,” he said.
The old packing facility has been turned into a market for selling fruit.
Hildebrand said the new packing facility was going to be constructed, regardless, but the grant helped soften the financial blow. “Every dollar helps,” he said.

Flower Farm Tour is scheduled for August 9

By Celeste Baumgartner
Ohio Correspondent

BUTLER COUNTY, Ohio – A perfect Sunday evening for flower lovers is coming up on Aug. 9 from 5-8 pm. A Flower Farm Tour will be visiting three neighboring flower farms. At each farm, visitors can pick a bucket of flowers, have refreshments, and learn what it takes to run a flower farm.

Morning Sun Flower Farm, the first tour stop, is owned by Mindy and Josh Staton, who also own the Farmers Collective in Hamilton. Mindy is a florist – she and her mom run Two Little Buds, also in Hamilton. A trend started where clients wanted more of a garden feel to their flowers. Since she and her husband lived on a farm, it was an easy step.

“That was a trend that started in 2015,” Mindy said. “ It made more sense for me to grow them instead of importing flowers that we could grow here in Ohio.”

Eventually, they opened the farm for u-pick flowers. They have now expanded to have a greenhouse and a hoop house.

“If someone is interested in starting a flower farm, I would say grow four or five easy plants: zinnias, cosmos, sunflowers, amaranths; start there and start small,” Mindy said. “Try 25 or 30 plants of each and then see how that goes. As you learn what works, then you can start adding perennials or annuals that are a little bit more finicky to grow.”

It is all a learning curve, she said. Start with a stand in front of your house or sell to a local florist. Then you can get into season expanders, winter sowing so you have flowers in early spring. People want local flowers.

The local flowers continue at the second tour stop, Farmhouse Blooms, where Sarah and Ray Seals have a little more than an acre of flowers on the family farm.

Sarah has always loved flowers. The fall before COVID, she bought seeds, planning to take flowers to farmers markets in the spring. COVID hit and things shut down. Instead of just growing the flowers for herself, she decided to open it up for u-pick.

“I invited people to the farm, and I was the first in the area to do that,” she said. “I didn’t even know flower u-pick existed; I just flew by the seat of my pants. I love to learn as I go.”

People were delighted to be able to get out and pick flowers during the pandemic. Later, when festivals started up again, Seals built a flower trailer, which she drives to festivals and other locations. People can come in and pick out a bouquet of cut flowers.

Above: Jennifer and Mark Bayne started taking flowers to the farmers market. Then they added u-pick for the flowers. They are trying to get into the wholesale and wedding market and have joined the Hamilton Bridal District.

Flower farming is a lot of work, Seals said. People need to find their niche. She got started because she married into a farm family and wanted to find her own thing to do on the farm. It keeps her happy.

And flower tourists will be happy as they continue to the third and final stop of the tour, 7 Wonders Farm. Besides flowers, 7 Wonders has a farm market so tourists can shop and take food home.

Jennifer and Mark Bayne and family had been homesteading in Colerain Township, a suburban area. They had backyard chickens and rabbits and “everything we shouldn’t have had in Colerain Township. Flowers were always in the picture, she said.

“It all started when my husband bought home some chickens,” Jennifer said. “You know the chicken math? You start with four and the next thing you know it’s 40.”

So, they bought some property in 2017. Jennifer was growing produce and her husband was not cooking it up fast enough, so they loaded up and headed to Oxford Farmers Market with mostly vegetables and a few flowers.

“Then we grew more flowers,” Jennifer said. “And then we started the u-pick for the flowers. We are trying to get more into the wholesale and wedding market. We recently joined the Hamilton Bridal District.

The Baynes have seven greenhouses, three heated and four that are not. The flowers are mostly in the non-heated greenhouses, but it helps them get an earlier start in the spring. “We can have Mother’s Day bouquets,” Jennifer said. “We get May flowers in April. Overwintering them in the ground, with a little cover, they come up a few weeks earlier.” The flower business has gotten bigger over the years. Their biggest sales are at farmers markets, especially the Oxford Farmers Market, home of Miami University. The students like the flowers. Jennifer and Mark’s daughter, Erin, makes most of the bouquets, and she is taking over the flower side of the business. “She has an eye for what the students are looking for,” Jennifer said. # Small in stature, big in appeal; miniature horse interest strong

By DOUG GRAVES
Ohio Correspondent

SPRINGFIELD, Ohio – They typically stand 34 inches tall and are valued as companions, therapy horses and show animals. They come in a wide variety of colors and coat patterns, including pinto, appaloosa and solid colors. They're gentle, intelligent and highly trainable. They're miniature horses.

According to the American Miniature Horse Association (AMHA), there are more than 6,000 AMHA members and around 240,000 miniature horses in the United States alone.

Earlier this month, the miniatures and their handlers converged at Champion's Center in Springfield for the AMHA Eastern Regional Championship.

Horses registered with AMHA must meet the association standard of perfection and cannot exceed 34 inches in height at the withers as measured from the last hairs of the mane.

The AMHA hosts many events in each state, all heading up to three regionals. The Eastern Regional Championship was the third of three stops heading up to the World Championship Show, which will be held in Fort Worth, Texas, Sept. 25-Oct. 3. The Central Regional Championship was at Will Rogers Memorial Center in Fort Worth in May while the Western Regional Championship was in Rancho Murieta, Calif., in June.

At the Springfield regional event, 143 entries from 12 states competed. Horsemen from nine states participated.

Laura Mullen served as AMHA show manager at each location and has served as AMHA show manager the past 35 years.

"Ask any of these miniature horse owners and they'll tell you they're cute, practical, versatile, approachable and have friendly temperaments," Mullen said. "Those five traits are what attracts people to miniature horses."

According to Mullen, miniature horses require lower maintenance and less space than their larger counterparts. They require less feed than full-sized horses (about 2-5 pounds per day) and they're suitable for urban or small-lot living. Miniatures can live 25-35 years, often outliving full-sized horses.

A smaller horse makes for easier transportation, especially when trekking to various shows, Mullen said.

"A lot of times you'll notice most of those who show miniatures are retired," Mullen said. "There comes a time when you don't want to get bumped off a big horse. They also require less space in terms of housing, and there's less feed involved. They're just easier to handle because they're smaller."

The AMHA has a youth division that allows eligible youth to participate in any AMHA-approved show. These shows offer more than 50 youth classes across disciplines such as halter, driving, jumping, showmanship and costume, judged in several age divisions.

"For children, they can be a first pony experience, teaching responsibility and horsemanship in a manageable way," Mullen said. "Miniature horses have become quite the attraction for youth."

"Children can reach them, carry their buckets, put their blankets on. They can learn horsemanship in a very safe way. Their dispositions are very good. We also have quite a few people who are special needs handicapped, and the miniatures are very good for them, too."

Her husband, John, serves as each show's steward, horse measurer and gate person.

"Miniature horse shows are a great family event because the parents and other relatives come and support the child," John said. "It gives the child a discipline heading into adulthood. It teaches them that when you fail you strive to do better the next time. It's absolutely a family environment, which is important more than anything else. It's a great hobby for youth."

Mini Horses

While youth and miniature horse participation is gaining momentum, the driving force in this equine sport are adults of all ages.

Erika Fix drove seven hours from South Central, Penn., to compete at the regional in Springfield. It was her third trip to this regional.

"Yep, it was a long drive to get here, but others have had to travel a lot farther than I did," said Fix, who made the trip to this regional with four miniatures. "I've qualified for the World Competition in Fort Worth, Texas, but the only thing holding me back is I'm a schoolteacher and getting off in September is a bit difficult."

Fix began showing miniatures when she was in college. Her son, 5, also shows.

"The camaraderie with other miniature owners is simply amazing," she said. "You show them for the fun of it. There's no money to be made in showing and it can be an expensive hobby. The good thing is they're easier to keep and they eat less. Mine eats greens and has a protein diet I mix with alfalfa."

Mike Blankenship, of Jackson, Tenn., shows his miniatures for the love of the sport and nothing else, he said.

"It's all about meeting new people, greeting old friends and traveling the country," he said.

Blankenship competes using a show cart, which he said can be expensive.

"I have three deluxe miniatures horse show carts and I paid just over $1,400 for each one," he said. "They have 20-inch wire wheels, patent leather and 52-inch shafts. I call them my Cadillacs. So yeah, you can put a lot of money into these miniatures but you do it because you love your horses and enjoy the people you get to meet."

According to the Mullens, the miniature horse appeal is as strong as ever.

"I think anytime you have recreational sports, whether it's camping cheerleading, horses or whatever, the numbers go down because of the cost to participate," John said. "However, with the miniature horses we maintain a certain base group. We may have 10 percent less participating than last year but that's because of the economy. The enthusiasm for the miniature horse is never going to fail."

Clay Target league provides team experience for rural youth

By TIM ALEXANDER
Illinois Correspondent

MASON, Mich. – Around 3,000 student-athletes from over 450 high schools across the nation met in central Michigan for the 2026 National Championships of the USA Clay Target Association (USACTA) trap shooting league.

During the July 10-12 competition, Fall River High School (Wisconsin) captured the national title with a team score of 485 targets out of 500. Fall River edged out four schools tied for second place with 484 out of 500. In the tournament's individual bracket, Nevyn Hengel from Sibley East High School (Minnesota) took top honors after firing a perfect 100 in a tie-breaking shoot-off.

Though individual and team statistics were kept and the top shooters acknowledged, USACTA President John Nelson said the league and tournament's true purpose is to provide both rural and city youth who may not fit into other team sports at their schools an opportunity to participate in and experience the camaraderie of a team sport and travel to meets including state and national-level tournaments.

"For around 40 percent of these kids, this is their only school-sponsored sport," Nelson told Farm World. "The best part about it is that we are all-inclusive. It doesn't matter your size or gender, and handicaps don't matter. It's a co-ed sport that checks every box; even if you are in a wheelchair you can participate."

Statistics bear out USACTA's claim that the sport of clay target shooting is perhaps the fastest-growing prep sport in the nation. Participants from 32 states, including Hawaii, were registered for the national competition.

"Forty-one states now have high school clay target teams and between the spring and fall seasons this year we will host more than 60,000 student-athletes," said Nelson, whose USACTA oversees both high school and collegiate-level trap and sporting clays teams (of that number, only around 2,000 participants are college-aged). "High schools have over 2,000 approved teams and that number grows each year. We are growing the number of new teams and athletes that are coming in every year even though the league has a 20 percent yearly turnover rate. We are adding between 13,000 and 16,000 new student athletes per year."

USACTA boasts a clean safety record. Over 150,000 student-athletes have participated in USACTA events since the league's 2012 inception with zero reported injuries, according to Nelson. "We've pulled the trigger over 300 million times and there's never been a reported injury. Even handling a shotgun, this is the safest sport you can participate in," he said.

Being part of a trap team instills the values of discipline, cooperation and teamwork in youth while providing a team environment that encourages improvement and rewards success, Nelson added. USACTA-sanctioned trap teams are led by around 11,000 dedicated volunteer coaches and assistants, many of whom are farmers, outdoorsmen or retired (or active) armed service or public safety employees, along with bankers, realtors and clergy.

"These volunteers work at the local level with student-athletes, parents and local shooting ranges and schools. There are various levels of how schools really support these teams. Some are all in, providing varsity letters and yearbook recognition. Everything they do complements what the state high school athletic association does as it relates to mission, equal opportunities and participation," Nelson said.

When asked why every high school doesn't get on the bandwagon and sponsor a team, Nelson replied: "That's a good question for their school boards. We tell them they don't have to be frontiersmen, because 2,000 other schools are already participating."

"These teams start off with five students and end up a few years later with 70 kids on their team. Some (rural) schools have over 70 percent participa-

South Dakota Agricultural Heritage Museum offers glimpse into the past

BROOKINGS, S.D. – For an antique farm collector, the Agricultural Heritage Museum in Brookings is a treasure trove. Connected with the South Dakota State University, the museum offers over 3,500 pieces of agricultural and mechanical tools and equipment, 1,500 artifacts, 8,300 documents, and more than 100,000 photographs. There is something for everyone. Keep in mind that not all these agricultural gems are on display at one time.

Visitors have a chance to see a replica of a 1915 farmhouse and learn about windmill power, and how electricity changed life on the farm.

The rarest item in the museum may be the Dakota tractor that they believe is the only one in existence. Built by G.W. Elliott & Co., of De Smet, the 1913 Dakota Tractor was donated by Bob Kunitz, of Aberdeen, S.D. The Kunitz Brothers bought the tractor 1914 and used it on their farm near Groton, S.D.

George Washington Elliott was a minister of the Church of Christ I, Brookline, S.D., and an inventor. Built in his barn, the tractor was a 4-cylinder, 22 horsepower machine that was difficult to drive, which made work in the field hard. This idea is confirmed by the placard at the museum which states, about Bob Kuntz that donated the tractor, “Bob wasn’t old enough to remember the tractor when it was operational but recalls his father saying because of the single wide rear wheel, it was hard to turn around at the end of the field.”

According to an article in the Marshall County Journal, about 20 tractors were built. Reports that the company was sold for back taxes indicate it disappeared from the horizon, and Rev. Elliott went on to new congregations.

Another great piece is the Farm Horse Tractor on display that was manufactured in Hartford, S.D. Only three were built in 1921. A placard shares that the engine is unknown. “Three-wheels with a high, wide front axle. What appears to be a mounting bracket on the front axle may have been intended for a cultivator...”

There is a very cool picture of the Farm Horse Tractor as well with the words, “Simple and easy to operate” written on the photograph.

One of the most riveting pieces of was used to break up sod, along with a plow to do the job, the prairie grass was worked into the soil, and it was made plantable and fertile. Once that job was done, the engine proved to be a great power source for threshing machines and more.

On their website, they share the story of their engine that spent its working life in Watertown, S.D. “It featured optional equipment purchased with the original engine including contractor’s fuel bunker and a fully-jacketed (northern) boiler.”

Owned by Otto Korth, he used the engine for threshing, and the engine came to the museum in February 1983. The engine was restored between October 1982 and June 1983.

Near the Case steam engine is a wooden Overby corn harvester that was pulled by 4-6 horses to operate.

There is a lot to see and do at this museum that celebrates the world of agriculture. Open Monday-Saturday from 10 a.m.-5 p.m. and closed on Sundays from January through March.

Feeding better quality hay means better conditioned cattle

I absolutely love hay season. I love to mow hay, rake hay and bale hay. I even like tedding hay. The smell of fresh cut hay is great and the way a barn smells when you fill it with second hay is awesome.

Obviously, I like the physical work but just like producing every other crop on the farm, producing the very best quality hay that can be made from each field is a challenge that excites me. From the days of hiring out to Chuck and Chris Hann in Lockbourne, Ohio, to load and unload hay, I learned the importance of making hay to feed

55 YEARS AND COUNTING FROM THE
TRACTOR SEAT
BY BILL WHITMAN

the animals at the Ohio State Veterinary School and then working several years with Dan Foor's dairy where forage was a vital part of milk production, it has been ingrained in me that the better quality hay you feed, the better conditioned animal you'll have.

Over the years I've listened to western ranchers disparage Eastern Cattle as being sub-standard to western cattle. For the most part, their reasoning is right. Out west, they put every effort into producing the best quality cattle they can. This begins with growing and harvesting the best quality forages possible. Here in eastern United States, too often making hay is the last thing on our list. It comes after everything else is done. The consequence is that the hay quality suffers from being made late and well after the peak nutritional value has passed. I have attended a number of forage days at Purdue over the years where Dr. Johnson showed how even low-quality grass hay has significant nutritional value if made at the right time in growth stage and put up the right way. The response from livestock, startling. So, if we want to change the perspective of Eastern Cattle, we need to meet the standards set by our western counterparts.

I would further argue that putting the priority on making and feeding higher quality feed would allow us to put livestock into the market that is superior to western cattle. If we fertilize our pastures, we can produce far more feed per acre than western states. If we fertilize our hay ground, we can produce a volume of nutritionally valuable hay per acre that can be reflected in the quality of our livestock. So why aren't we doing these things?

For years, the size of our herds was relatively small – 20 cows and a bull. So, there wasn't really a great deal of money to work with. Today, that's changed. The price we're getting seems high, but is the first time in history, the price is commensurate with the market, so we should be investing in the infrastructure of our farms and ranches along with improving our long-term feed sources.

In addition, the buyers we generally sell have to place a price low enough to absorb the costs to bring the cattle up to minimum standards acceptable to buyers in the western states. I suggest that if we feed our cattle appropriately, pre-condition the calves, break them to feed comparable rates of gain to western states and develop a network of buyers that will pay for meeting their standards. At the same time, now is a good time to replace our cows with the best genetics available and bulls that match up well with your herd. It takes a few years to benefit from these upgrades, but the expense is absorbable these days.

Finally, back to producing quality hay, equipment is key. A good mower conditioner, (I like the flail type conditioner as it beats up the forage, often making the hay less "stemmy"). A rake that effectively cleans the ground, and a baler that makes as tight of a bale possible. This puts more weight in the bale and helps shed the weather to help maintain the quality throughout the fall and winter. Even in the good times, make decisions based on short- and long-term NEEDS. Short term for cash flow, and long term for building your herds up with quality becoming your stock and trade. And especially with second cut, take time to smell the very best aroma that summer offers.

Horse Sense: There is no substitute for quality, no substitute for time, and never forget where your blessings for both come from.

Rising dairy cow numbers contribute to milk output increases

It was a hot smoky week, particularly in the Great Lakes, Upper Midwest, New York, Washington D.C., and parts east, as well as the other Washington out west, courtesy of wildfires mostly in Canada.

Rising dairy cow numbers meanwhile, kept milk output above a year ago. The USDA's latest data has June Dairy Month output at 19.7 billion pounds, up 2.3 percent from June 2025, which follows a 2.1 percent rise in May. The 24-state total came in at 18.9 billion pounds, up 2.4 percent from a year ago.

StoneX points out that fat and protein in the milk were also up from last year, which pushed component adjusted production up 3.7 percent from last year.

"The majority of the heat waves seen in the U.S. this summer happened in July, so we likely won't see the effects of that until the next production report. That began to underpin cheese markets along with stronger EU prices due to a heat wave there as well in July. Nonetheless, temperatures have cooled moving into the end of July which should help milk production recover a bit short term."

May milk output in the 50 states was revised down 36 million pounds to 20.5 billion, still up 2.1 percent from a year ago, instead of the 2.3 percent originally announced. The 24-state total was revised down 43 million pounds, to 19.7 billion, up 2.4 percent.

June cow numbers totaled 9.677 million, up 19,000 from the May count, which was revised down 7,000 head, but was up 192,000 or 2.0 percent from a year ago, and a 33-year high, according to the Daily Dairy Report. The 24-state count, at 9.231 million head, was up 18,000 from May's total, which was revised down 12,000 head, but was up 185,000 or 2.0 percent from a year ago.

June milk per cow averaged 2,036 pounds in the 50 states, up 6 pounds or 0.3 percent from a year ago. The 24-state average, at 2,051 pounds, was up 7 pounds or 0.3 percent from 2025. The May average was revised down 2 pounds in both.

The USDA's weekly data shows 45,100 head of dairy cattle were sent to slaughter the week ending July 4, up 4,900 or 12.2 percent from a year ago. Total to date, 1,398,300 head have retired from the dairy industry, up 70,200 head or 5.3 percent from a year ago.

The August Federal order Class I base milk price is $18.76 per hundredweight, down $2.57 from July, and 17 cents below a year ago. It equates to $1.61 per gallon, down from $1.63 a year ago. The eight-month Class I average stands at $18.45, down from $19.45 a year ago, and compares to $19.43 in 2024.

The Daily Dairy Report's Monica Ganley Quarterra wrote in the July 17 Milk Producer Council newsletter, "U.S. consumers felt a bit of relief in June as prices eased somewhat. The Consumer Price Index, published by the Bureau of Labor Statistics (BLS), eased to 3.5 percent during the month, down 0.7 percentage points from May due especially to softer energy prices. Lower gasoline prices were also the key driver that boosted the Consumer Sentiment Index (CSI), which rose to 54.4 points in the preliminary July reading published by the University of Michigan. The CSI now sits at its highest reading since February, before the conflict in Iran began. While lower inflation and stronger consumer sentiment are undeniably favorable, the outlook remains fraught as the recent breakdown in the ceasefire between the U.S. and Iran has raised gasoline prices anew."

She adds that "Food price inflation also slowed in June though menu price increases continue to outpace those of grocery stores. BLS data showed that the price of food consumed outside the home was up 3.4 percent versus the same month last year. However, this marks the lowest year over year gain since 2020 when pandemic related complications drove restaurant prices dramatically upward."

Reports from the National Restaurant Association indicate that conditions improved slightly in May, but that falling foot traffic remained a challenge. Meanwhile, the price of food consumed at home rose 2.7 percent compared to June 2025, similar performance to what has been recorded the last few months."

strong. The latest data showed cheese imports in June were up 43.4 percent from June 2025, with most coming from New Zealand and Australia, however U.S. cheese saw a significant boost. Year-to-date cheese imports were up 24.8 percent. Butter imports were up 6.4 percent and up 11.3 percent YTD.

Combined whole milk and skim milk powder imports were up 15.1 percent, with whole milk powder up 26.9 percent, third-largest June on record, according to HighGround Dairy. HighGround says New Zealand accounted for 94 percent of the month's total.

Whey product imports were up 33.6 percent from a year ago, and that despite China's aggressive move to reduce the nation's hog population, says HGD. Whey imports from the U.S. were up 145 percent.

Checking CME prices, after closing Friday at $1.6275 per pound, the Cheddar blocks were trading Thursday morning at $1.67, highest since April 7, and three cents above a year ago, as traders anticipated the June Cold Storage report Friday afternoon. The barrels were at $1.63 Thursday, highest since Nov. 14, 2025, and a half-cent above a year ago, after closing Friday at $1.6125.

High summer temperatures in the Central region continue to negatively impact milk output, according to Dairy Market News. Spot prices for Class III milk ranged from flat-Class to $5-over at mid-week. Some cheesemakers got offers of milk last week from plants with down time but those offers dried up this week. Cheese output was steady to lighter, as some plants didn't have the milk for full schedules. Domestic demand for cheese is starting to pick up. Export interest is steady. Inventories of cheese barrels are expected to tighten in the coming weeks.

Milk output continues to fill cheese manufacturing in the West. In a few parts, some unforeseen plant downtime kept spot milk loads more available than anticipated. Domestic cheese demand is steady, while export demand varies from steady to stronger.

Cash butter sunk to $1.51 per pound Thursday, lowest CME price in four weeks and 95.50 cents below a year ago. It closed Friday at $1.59.

Central region cream production was lighter this week. Downtime at production plants was having a negative impact. Most spot cream is going to Class II processors and some butter makers were searching for it to keep churns active. Butter production was steady and demand was unchanged in domestic markets, but export interest is strong. Inventories are not excessive, according to DMN.

Cream production in the West was fulfilling manufacturer needs, although cream multiples were increasing.

Butter production was busy and many butter makers said cream volumes continue to push anticipated downtime back.

Grade A nonfat dry milk dropped to $1.40 per pound Thursday, lowest since Jan. 28, but still 11.25 cents above a year ago. It closed Friday at $1.47.

Dry whey was trading Thursday at 69 cents per pound, 15 cents above a year ago, following a Friday finish at 69.50 cents per pound.

Antique tractor pulls are popular form of nostalgic entertainment

One of the customers nearest to my IH dealership in northern Illinois back in the 1980s became a close friend. He's gone now, but his grandson Grant continues along with his son Larry. They gave me an update on crops and equipment.

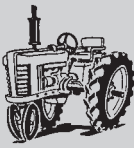

A cold spring resulted in some late planting, but a warm and wet June brought corn up to shoulder height by the 4th. Soybeans vary from poor to good due to some late planting. Given the poor spring weather, Grant and Larry expect a poorer 2026 yield than either of the last two years.

Fortunately, Grant had purchased all his fertilizer for his 1,580 acres before the Gulf War. He had also ordered fuel before that event, which he considers pure luck.

Grant plans no machinery purchases this year. He has a well-equipped shop and does most maintenance himself. His major tractor, a

ALL ABOUT TRACTORS

BY PAUL WALLEM

2005 Case IH Steiger 375 STX, has 5,200 hours. Their 2014 Kinze planter requires a lot of maintenance, but Grant does it all, besides maintaining a part-time job.

He uses AI as a tool regarding plant diseases, fertilizer impact, etc. I was surprised to learn that a seasonal employee that had started working for Grant's grandfather in 1972 still works for Grant all these years later.

Association of Equipment Manufacturers report

Their report indicates tractor sales of all sizes were down 22 percent through May versus last year. Total May sales were 16,815 compared to 21,461 last year.

Combine sales nationally were 138 for May, down 58 percent from last year.

Year-to-date for the year through May was 1,066, down 15 percent compared to the same period in 2025.

From Capital News Illinois

Family farm bankruptcies surged 46 percent nationally in 2025. In the Midwest, filings increased 70 percent. In Illinois, they rose 55 percent. Total farm debt is forecast to hit a record $624.7 billion in 2026, as overhead costs like land rent and interest keep climbing.

Why antique tractor pulls? (courtesy Farmall Fantasy)

Antique tractor pulls are a popular motor sport. People do this for nostalgic entertainment, the thrill of friendly competition, and to showcase the mechanical skills needed to restore or modify historic farm equipment.

Throughout the country, every conceivable old tractor can be seen competing. Even steam-powered tractors and crawlers can be seen at some events. Some over 100 years old can be seen competing. Memories of the past are everywhere at these pulls.

Certain models show up often in these events: some are John Deere G, Oliver 88, John Deere 70, Case 900, MM 5 Star, International W9, AC WD45, Farmall M and more.

The sleds used in tractor pulls are many and varied. Some are used locally for antique pulls, some travel regionally for higher horsepower pulls. The sled pictured with this column is one amongst many.

It's time to check your fields for soybean cyst nematode

The National Weather Service Climate Prediction Center's outlook to Aug. 4 called for likely above normal temperatures and likely below normal precipitation. The three-month outlook for October through December is leaning above normal temperature and near normal precipitation.

The meteorological winter outlook for December 2026 through February 2027 is for warmer than normal temperatures and near normal to drier than normal precipitation. The past month ranked the 4th hottest out of 134 years for most of our climate district, yet the U.S. Drought Monitor does not show any drought in our area of the Midwest (Michigan, Ohio, Indiana and Illinois) as of July 14. Likewise, the U.S. Seasonal Drought Outlook for July 16 through October 31, 2026, does not show a tendency for drought.

Corn's response to weather stressors includes heat, drought and hazy conditions according to Ohio State's Alex Lindsey, Laura Lindsey and Osler Ortez. Haze is a matter of light diffusion, recently due to wildfire smoke. Reports have shown a reduced light intensity of 15 percent did not affect corn yield. One estimate from Nebraska suggested a 46 percent decrease in light intensity for seven days in mid to late August reduced corn yields by about 5 percent. Eric Snodgrass, of Nutrien Ag Solutions, said smoke from wildfires in Oregon and western Canada will continue into our area of the upper Midwest, although it will be less intense than the recent haze from the wildfires of northern Ontario.

may not show up in highly productive soils until fall harvest with stagnating or declining yields. In lighter, sandier soils, soybean plants may be stunted, yellow and lack vigor. Although visual symptoms can be confused with mites or diseases, carefully dig up some soybean roots in the affected area, gently knock off the soil and allow the roots to air dry for a minute. Although a 10x hand lens may be needed to identify lemon-shaped cysts, it is possible to see them with the naked eye, keeping in mind they will be much smaller than nodules. The MSU Plant and Pest Diagnostic Clinic, the OSU Plant and Pest Diagnostic Clinic or private labs such as A&L Great Lakes Lab in Fort Wayne, Ind., or Midwest Laboratories in Omaha, Neb., are some nematology labs available to farmers.

Crickets can act as an outdoor thermometer by their chirping. Simply count the number of chirps in 14 seconds, then add 40 to get the temperature in degrees Fahrenheit (F). Crickets are cold-blooded and take on the temperature of their surroundings. Chirping is a cricket's way of communicating. Male crickets use chirping to attract females, scare off other males, or warn of danger. Contrary to popular belief, crickets do not use their legs to chirp but produce the iconic sound by rubbing the edges of their wings together.

Illinois producers can participate in weather survey through Sept. 5

URBANA, Ill. – Illinois farmers, agricultural professionals and others involved in agricultural operations impacted by weather are invited to participate in a new survey examining how weather forecasts are used to support on-farm decisions.

Researchers from the University of Illinois are conducting the survey to better understand how Illinois agriculture uses weather forecast information. Results will help inform future weather tools, communications and resources tailored to agricultural needs.

The survey is open to individuals 18 years and older who are involved in Illinois' agriculture, including producers, crop advisers, agricultural retailers and others who regularly use weather information in their work. Participation is anonymous and voluntary. The responses will help researchers identify opportunities to improve weather forecasting resources for the agricultural community.

The survey will remain open through Sept. 5, 2026.

Participants can complete the survey online at: https://illinois.qualtrics.com/jfe/form/SV\_a5Bg4szByk-3ww9U.

Questions about the survey may be directed to graduate researcher Naomi Dolan at ndolan8@illinois.edu.

Ragweed pollen fills the afternoons as Deep Summer ends

It is August
The flocks are beginning to form
I will take with me the emptiness of my hands
What you do not have you find everywhere. – From “Provisions” by M. S. Merwin

The Phases of the Moon

Aug. 5: The Katydid Moon enters its final quarter.
Aug. 12: The Field Cricket Moon is new.
Aug. 19: The Moon enters its second quarter.
Aug. 26: The Field Cricket Moon is full.

The Weather in August

Between the last week of May through the first week of September, the 14 major cool fronts of summer cross the United States. As these high-pressure systems approach, temperatures and humidity typically rise. After the passage of the fronts, slightly cooler weather occurs, suitable for outdoor work and recreation, followed by up to a week of heat and humid conditions. August fronts often reach the Mississippi around the following dates; they come through about two days earlier in the West, a day or two later in the East:
Aug. 4: The weather in advance of this minor front is some of the hottest of the summer. Highs in the cool 70s and lows in the 50s are rare in most of the nation between August 1st and 3rd.
Aug. 10: The Aug. 10 cool front can bring frost to the higher elevations in the West. Its strength also frequently causes violent weather throughout the Great Plains and the South.
Aug. 17: This is the weather system that brings the chance of a killing frost to portions of the North; snow occurs at upper elevations in the Rocky Mountains.

Aug. 24: This high erodes summer a little more, often bringing an end to the Dog Days.
Aug. 29: Rain precedes this front two years in three, and when the Aug. 29 high-pressure system arrives, the likelihood for chilly highs only the 60s or 70s becomes almost autumnal.

Natural Calendar

As Deep Summer ends, ragweed pollen fills the humid afternoons, wood nettle goes to seed, honeysuckle berries and wild cherries ripen, and hickory nuts and black walnuts drop to the undergrowth.
Blackberries are ready to eat when ragweed blossoms. And the season's second-last wave of wildflowers – the Joe Pye weed, monkey flower, tall coneflower, clearweed, horseweed, white snake-root, jumpseed, prickly mallow, virgin's bower, false boneset, field thistle and Japanese knotweed – bloom in the open fields and along the fence rows.
Golden and purple coneflowers, and red, pink and violet phlox still rule the gardens. Orange-and-gold-flowered trumpet vines still curl through trellises. Ephemeral resurrection lilies briefly replace the day lilies, the Asiatic lilies and the Oriental lilies. Mums and stonecrop start to color the dooryards.
In the shade of the woods, leafcup is the dominant flower, touch-me-nots beginning to complement its bloom. Along the lakeshores, arrowhead blossoms as rusty dodder winds through tattered black raspberry bushes.
In the mornings, cardinals and doves still sing, starting half an hour before dawn, often continuing through the day, sometimes greeting the night with vespers. Blue jays still care for their young, whining and flitting through the bushes, but starlings and warblers become more restless. In some years, the robins give long singsong performances. Crows and hawks spar in the high trees. Cicadas compete with crickets at dusk.

Across the Midwest, almost all the corn is silking by now, and a third of the crop could be in dough. Two-thirds of the soybeans are flowering or setting pods. Oats and the second cut of alfalfa, running neck and neck, are ordinarily three-fourths harvested. Farmers are making corrective lime and fertilizer applications for August and September seeding.
Hummingbird moths still come to the impatiens. Touch-me-nots are in bloom, tall bell flowers strong and blue, burdock holds beside the oxeye, bouncing bets, and new six-petalled wild cucumbers, the yellow and the blue flowered wild lettuce, bull thistle, virgin's bower, tall nettle, prickly mallow, small woodland sunflower, soft velvet leaf, sundrops, and heal all.
Along the rivers, bur marigolds are budding, zig-zag goldenrod, and broad-leaved swamp goldenrod. Water horehound, willow herb and swamp milkweed are still open, still a little wood min, too. Late Summer's jumpseeds aren't ready to jump yet. Damselflies still hunt by the water. Cabbage butterflies still mate.
In the Field and Garden
Sodding and seeding of the lawn is often done before the cooler days of fall. Test soil in your fall and winter garden as well as in the fields where you intend to sow wheat, rye, alfalfa, canola, clover and timothy.
Cut corn for silage after completing the second and third cuts of hay. Dig potatoes and pick commercial tomato plants clean. Complete harvest of plums, pears, watermelons, blackberries and peaches.

The breeding season opens for your goats and sheep. Consider supplements for the rams and bucks: carrots, oats, bran, iodized salt and good greens are popular additions to feed.

ALMANACK LITERATURE A LITTLE BIRD TOLD ME

By Susan Perkins, Hardtimes Farm, Ky.
While I was hanging clothes on the line, a black-capped chickadee flew down and landed just a few feet from where I was working. It jumped up and down, twittered and carried on like I was doing something wrong. I had never had a wild bird come this close before, so I knew a baby bird must be close to where I was working.
I started looking for the baby. Sure enough, a baby had fledged from the nest and ended up on the ground. But the baby was nowhere near where I was working. Something else was wrong.
I looked around and noticed a piece of tin lying up under some scrub brush. I knew there had to be a snake hiding there and it was after the baby chickadee. It may have already got some of the fledging babies, as I only saw one.
I picked up the tin and jumped back. Just as I suspected, there was a four-foot black snake under the tin. One of my dogs jumped in and made quick work of him.
I put the baby bird up in a tree and mom and dad continued feeding it till it finally flew away. This has never happened again.
Guess there's something to the saying, "A little bird told me so."

There are many reasons to dislike bumper-pulled trailers

Have you seen a big influx of bumper-pulled utility trailers being towed by huge pickups in your area?

That's certainly the case in my part of the world. My theory is that by the time the manufacturers put two rows of seating with good leg room on the chassis of their trucks, there is hardly enough room left for a decent bed. And I don't see too many longbeds because they end up being longer than a coal train. So, truck owners are buying trailers to haul the stuff they used to haul in their pickups.

I have pulled all kinds of trailers with all kinds of trucks in my life. Because my old man was a truck driver, I learned to drive a semi by the time I was 18. I've pulled everything from horse trailers to house trailers and I gotta tell you, I hate bumper-pull trailers and it's not just because I went over a hundred-foot cliff in a pickup when I was 17 with a horse trailer on back. At least it was when we started going over the cliff but by the time we hit bottom, the truck and trailer had become uncoupled... divorced... unattached.

The real reason I hate bumper-pull trailers was because of the hatred I felt toward my wife's stepdad who was the most pompous diabolical arse God ever put on this planet. And that's no exaggeration. He wanted to take my wife's mother, who I really liked, far away from her children, which was all right by me. In fact, I offered to drive a pickup with a 20-foot U-Haul trailer filled with all their belongings just to make sure he was gone for good.

They rented the U-Haul and borrowed a pickup so I didn't have to use mine. I didn't even have to pack all their stuff up; all I had to do was drive six hours away right through the middle of Los Angeles traffic. My wife and I got to the in-law's new abode just fine and we stayed the night so we didn't have to drive another six hours back home in the same day. Early the next morning we were on our way home with the trailer when right in the middle of LA traffic I looked in the rear-view mirror and saw the trailer was swinging to and fro and was carrying the truck with it. As carefully as I could I slowed down to work my way over to the shoulder of the road and eventually got everything shut down. Somehow the trailer had come off the ball and was only held on by the safety chains. I immediately suspected the evil stepdad of trying to get us killed. Please note that it didn't happen on the trip the previous day because he wanted to get his belongings to their new home but after that I suspected him of getting up at 2 in the morning and monkey-wrenching with the ball on the bumper or the coupling of the trailer. I couldn't file attempted murder charges because the people at U-Haul called it a "no fault" failure.

Seated at a table at a video sale in Reno, I was telling this story to a couple who were friends of ours when all of a sudden the wife, who is usually very quiet, said, "That's nothing," she said as she stared at her husband derisively, "wait till you hear about our little trailering incident."

The husband shrunk down in his seat trying to disappear under the table when his wife started telling the story. "We were going to pick up two horses that we'd bought in Colorado. We were having a good trip and even did a little sightseeing along the way. We found ourselves on a lightly traveled road near Cedar City, Utah, when the ball came off the bumper. We were going downhill at a pretty good rate and the next thing we heard was a big commotion behind us."

"My gosh," I asked, "Weren't you frightened?"

"Of course I was," said the wife. "Next thing you know we both looked out the driver's side window and saw a trailer passing us doing about 80 mph. Then pea brain here scratches his head and says, 'Look honey. There's a trailer just like ours.'"
